Establishment of the Swiss Young Academy

Bern, 16 December 2019

The Swiss Academies of Arts and Sciences are establishing the Swiss Young Academy and, in doing so, becoming part of a successful global network. The Swiss Young Academy offers young researchers the opportunity to carry out inter- and transdisciplinary projects. Its first-ever call for members begins in mid-December 2019 and lasts until the end of January 2020.

The Swiss Young Academy consists of a general assembly with twenty-five members, an executive board, an advisory council, and an administrative office. Members may apply for up to CHF 30,000 in funding for joint projects as well as funding for personal projects. The individual academies and centres of excellence within the association of the Swiss Academies of Arts and Sciences have pledged to actively collaborate with the Swiss Young Academy. This support provides young academics in Switzerland with the opportunity to call attention to their particular concerns. The call for members begins in mid-December 2019 and lasts until the end of January 2020.

The main objectives of the Swiss Young Academy are to enhance its members' skills and expand their academic networks. The organisation also provides members with the opportunity to advance their academic careers with a mentoring programme. In addition, the opportunity to carry out creative and innovative projects in an institutional setting improves the dialogue between science and society. In becoming members of the Swiss Young Academy, young researchers join a nationally and internationally active network and they form a community promoting collaboration beyond the borders of individual institutions, disciplines, and countries. And as a result, Switzerland will improve its positioning and expand its networks within Europe and beyond.

Over forty national young academies and more than ten similar institutions already exist worldwide, with the trend towards additional young academies gaining momentum. Since 2012, the topic of young academies has been the subject of a proactive, targeted exploration by the Swiss Academies of Arts and Sciences, and they are now excited to announce the establishment of the first young academy in Switzerland.

The Swiss Academies of Arts and Sciences is an association of the Swiss Academy of Sciences (SCNAT), the Swiss Academy of Humanities and Social Sciences (SAHS), the Swiss Academy of Medical Sciences (SAMS), and the Swiss Academy of Engineering Sciences (SATW). It further comprises the centre of excellence for technology assessment (TA-SWISS) and Science et Cité as well as other scientific networks. The year 2019 marks the establishment of the Swiss Young Academy.

The academies engage themselves specifically for an equitable dialogue between science and society, and they advise politics and society in science-based issues that are relevant to society. They represent sciences across institutions and disciplines. Established in the scientific community, they have access to expertise and excellence and can therefore contribute specific knowledge to important political questions.
